Chartwell Westerham, Kent.

Dear Sir,

It is with great pleasure that I accept the suggestion of the Belgian Ambassador in London to offer you the original of my drawing, concerning your courageous speech in the Commons.

In this way it will constitute an homage, coming from two small but most interested countries; and though one of these nations will be represented by its highest official in England, and the other only by a most unofficial cartoonist, I know that you will realise how they are both inspired by the same feelings of gratitude, of which the little cartoon is only an understatement.

I thank you for your kind telegram which gave me great pleasure.

Yours very sincerely
